Foreword

The majority of articles in the present volume consists of papers presented at a two-day international conference in honour of Dr Ino Nicolaou. This took place at the Archaeological Research Unit of the University of Cyprus on the 24th and 25th of November 2007, and was organised by myself and my colleagues Maria Kantirea and Theodoros Mavroyiannis. Most of the speakers invited are long-standing friends of Mrs Nicolaou, with whom she has collaborated in a variety of ways over the years. Other speakers included younger scholars who follow closely the path laid by Mrs Nicolaou in the study of ancient Cyprus. All were delighted to come and pay tribute to a colleague who for many decades now has been serving Cypriot archaeology, mainly but not only as an epigraphist and numismatist. In fact, what was intended as a one-day conference eventually spread over two days — such was the enthusiasm of all those approached! Other colleagues, like Mando Oikonomidou, Olivier Picard and Ioannes Touratsoglou, who did not take part in the conference, sent their offerings to be included in the present volume in her honour.

Having studied Classical Philology at Athens University, Ino Nicolaou went on to the University of St Andrews in Scotland, with a scholarship of the British Council, in order to specialise in Greek and Latin Epigraphy. Later she earned her doctorate degree from the University of Göteborg in Sweden.

Since her student days and her first article that came out in 1952, Ino Nicolaou has been publishing at a steady pace, and she is the author of seven monographs and over 130 articles and chapters in scientific periodicals and collective works. Of prime importance amongst her monographs are the publications of the stamped amphora handles and the coins from the House of Dionysos in Paphos, as well as the volume on the Prosopography of Ptolemaic Cyprus, which have become indispensable tools for the study of Hellenistic Cyprus. The latter, in fact, won the first prize of the Academy of Athens in 1978. From her many articles I single out the series Inscriptiones Cypriae Alphabeticae, the annual instalments of which have been appearing with enviable punctuality since 1963. I do not think that there is a scholar working on Hellenistic and Roman Cyprus who does not use the precious series on a constant basis.

In earlier days, Mrs Nicolaou took part in excavations at the Kerameikos and the Pnyx in Athens, and at Palmyra in Syria. Later, when working for the Department of Antiquities of Cyprus, she carried out excavations at the House of Dionysos in Paphos, at the 'Commissariato' of Limassol, the Eastern necropolis of Amathous and the locality Phoinikas of Evrychou.

For the wider scientific community Ino Nicolaou is known for her contribution to the Epigraphy, Numismatics and Prosopography of Cyprus. For all those working in Cyprus, Cypriots and foreigners, she is also known for her sterling work in the Department of Antiquities, which she served faithfully for 29 years, and from which she retired in 1989 as Senior Archaeological Officer.

On a personal level, I would like to thank Mrs Nicolaou for the friendly way in which she welcomed me when, on my return to Cyprus in 1982, I was employed at the Department of Antiquities. When she realised my interest in the study of ancient mosaics, she passed on to me, of her own initiative, the charge of Cypriot representative in the Association Internationale pour l'Etude de la Mosaique Antique (AIEMA), a move that was the outset of my close involvement with this committee and has marked my career ever since.

Dr Nicolaou once said to me that her professional motto is τὸ ἀθορύβως ἐργάζεσθαι καὶ δημιουργεῖν (to silently work and create); and she has kept true to this without ever seeking the limelight. In 2009, The International Numismatic Council elected her Honorary Member 'in recognition of her many scholarly contributions to numismatics and her service to the Numismatic discipline at large'. I hope that the conference we organised in her honour, and the present volume, comprising articles offered with affection and respect by many of her friends, will also give her joy and satisfaction.

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank my colleagues Maria Kantirea and Theodoros Mavroyiannis for their assistance in the organisation of the Conference and the participants for their scholarly contributions. To Maria Kantirea I am especially indebted for her assistance with the French texts. I would also like to thank Professor Charalambos Bakirtzis for very kindly reviewing the manuscript for SIMA, Aileen O'Donoghue and above all Jennifer Webb and David Frankel for all their help during the preparation of this volume.
